

A PLUNGE INTO THE UNKNOWN

In a departure from the elaborate studio sets he has used in the past, Jeff Bark ventured into the great outdoors for his latest body of work, Lucifer Falls, set in a New York state park. Bark would wait until it was about to rain — and if the weather had other ideas he would set off a smoke bomb to create a misty effect — before shooting his subjects in freezing waters. Lucifer Falls is on show at Hasted Hunt Kraeutler Gallery, New York City, until October 16. Visit www.hastedhunt.com
Photographs: Jeff Bark