Martin Schoeller, the award-winning fine artist and GQ contributing photographer, has included several GQ shoots in his new monograph "Portraits", a fantastic compilation of some of his best big-concept photographs out this month. It's a wowing body of work that only Martin could have made—Paul Rudd dying a dozen little dogs pink, Don Rickles in bed with Chris Rock, Usain Bolt posing like a greek statue in the Metropolitan Museum of Art among others—and it's also featured in a show that opens tonight at New York's Hasted Kraeutler Gallery. Check out our slideshow to see some of our favorite Schoeller/GQ collaborations.
