Amy Phelan's Fall Gallery Highlights: Atrageous

Divine Love, 2011

By Amy Phelan | November 22, 2011 | New York

Fall in New York is high energy as people return to the city from their summer sanctuaries ready to get back to their familiar routines. For the art world, fall means the beginning of a jam-packed, atrageous season of art openings, auctions, museums exhibitions, and galas. I've enjoyed seeing many phenomenal exhibitions by artists whose work I've followed for a long time, and others whose work I'm just beginning to discover.

Marc Dennis' show, Honey Bunny, at Hasted Kraeutler is another treat and is on view until December 3. I've loved Marc's work for years. He has a gift for realistic painting, especially for textures, unlike any other artist – check it out.
